Textbook: Calculus: Applications and Technology (third edition) by E. Tomastik. Make sure your copy is of the custom edition for the University of Vermont.

We will cover significant parts of chapters 6, 7, 8, 9, and 11, plus (as time permits) portions of chapters 10 and 12.

Grading: I will assign homework about once a week. You are free to hand your homework in if you want me to look it over, but you will not be graded on it. Your grade will be based on 6 in-class quizzes, a midterm, and a final. The quizzes and midterm will take place at times to be announced; the final will take place at the time set by the registrar. Reading assignments and other class information will be posted on the website. The quizzes, midterm, and final will be weighted as follows in figuring your grade: 60% quizzes, 15% midterm, 25% final.

Policy on missed quizzes and tests: I am usually pretty easy about these, as long as you have a legitimate excuse (illness, car trouble, religious observance, family emergency, etc.). I will be happy to arrange convenient times and places to make up missed exams (as long as everybody isn’t asking for them at once).

Usually I will not ask for written verification of excuses, but I might start doing so if I feel that people are abusing my trust. If I do ask you for such verification, you should not think that you are the bad guy. However, you should be prepared to provide written verification (from a doctor or an adviser) if you fail to show up for the midterm or final.

Fair warning: If you come to an exam feeling ill, take it, and do badly on it, you will be stuck with the score.

Policy on learning disabilities: If you have a learning disability that requires special accommodations (such as untimed or large-print exams), the University and I will be happy to provide them. However, it is your responsibility to inform me and ACCESS (656-7753) well ahead of time if you do require such accommodations. Any request for special accommodations will be kept completely confidential.
